ABSTRACT

This research was aimed to study scenarios of Kalasin Rajabhat University to be a university for local community development in the next decade (B.E.2560) which will comply with the elements of the purposes of The Law of Rajabhat University 2004. Modified Delphi technique was used as the research methodology to forecast scenarios. There were target groups which were outside experts, university executives, institutional representatives, and employers who employ graduates.

The research results were:

1. Learning and teaching management aspects

Suitable multimedia should be used in learning and teaching management which should consist of normal media and information technological media as well as an online registration system. New curriculum in various fields of study should be developed to serve local needs and the regional market. The teachers' role should be changed into facilitators' role which encourages studying.

2. Research aspect

Research should be conducted on curriculum development and institutional development in order to improve learning and teaching management, administration and service of the university, problem-solving and sustainable local development. The university should focus on new knowledge to develop local technology to solve any problems.

3. Academic service aspect

Capability of information and communication technology should be improved to serve the national policy. A teacher and educational staff development center on the campus and in other provinces should be established. Libraries and academic service centers should be upgraded and equipped with information and communication technology (ICT).

The university website should be the main local knowledge management center. Moreover, cooperation and a network of communications should be established and maintained between the university and its counterparts locally and nationally.

4. Art and culture retention aspect

The university should cooperate with local administration and other local and national governmental sectors, to develop and publicize Thai arts and cultures nationally and internationally.

5. Organizational management aspect

Merging Kalasin Rajabhat University with Rajamongala University, Kalasin Campus to form Kalasin University results in the occurrence of a network of institutional management.
